

assistance to get through, the needy need some assistance. The food stamps is working, let's don't put these temptations before them, let's stick with what we have, and if something better comes along, then let's buy that system. But let's keep the children's food coming to the mouths via the food stamps, the best method we have. Don't sacrifice one, two, three, four children's meals for the sake of trying to train somebody on how to spend a $20 bill, they don't need that training. Thank you.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Madam President and members of the Legislature, I didn't know for sure what Senator Lynch's conclusion would be from his discussion, but he and I are in the same position in terms of supporting this amendment. I listened to Senator Pirsch talk earlier, and until I went over there and talked to her directly, I didn't realize she and I are also supporting Senator Janssen's amendment. Senator Witek and I argued for 15 minutes before we realized that we both support Senator Janssen's amendment. I think we ought to adopt his amendment. All of these other things are well-intentioned. And on this particular idea of cashing out food stamps, I'm not going to say that the people who are pushing that idea are trying to be hurtful as I think they are with reference to other parts of the bill. That's why I've tried to discuss this only in terms of the negatives that I see in doing that, not challenging the intentions of the people who support the cashing out. I just think that under all of the circumstances that will be created by this bill the best thing to do would at least maintain intact the nutritional aspect of the program which is done through food stamps. I agree with Senator Matzke, Senator Beutler and others who have suggested that a stigma has attached itself to food stamps. I don't disagree with that. But despite that, I think overall the better good, the greater good will be if we retain the food stamp program as we have it now. I support, I repeat, I support Senator Janssen's amendment. And I have three words that can solve the welfare problem, three words of three letters each, actually four letters when you make it plural, jobs, jobs, jobs.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Beutler.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Question.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Question has been called. Do I see five
